

Protection Money in Health Care

MOLLY MULEBRIAR
SPECIAL REPORT

“Paying protection money (PPO access fees) for the promise of no balance billing against egregious, arbitrary sticker pricing that have no relationship to costs whatsoever, and agreeing to provider reimbursement levels based upon secretive contracts you cannot see or audit, violates fiduciary duties and is contrary to basic, common American business practices.”

“I am sure we will one day see plan participants sue their plan for breach of fiduciary duties. We are seeing this trend among retirement plans – health plans will be next. “
